Since the Russian invasion of February 24, 2022, the lives of the Ukrainian people have changed fundamentally. Me, War and Toy Grenade is a series of vignettes about people who are looking for ways to adapt to a new reality. Each of them faces a choice: go or stay, fight or hide, save yourself or help your neighbor. These are stories from "the rear": from the depths of the Kharkiv metro, from roadblocks in the capital's sleeping areas, from the occupied suburbs, from telegram chats and conversations with the dead. These are stories about love and jealousy, about care and helplessness, about confusion and hope that "in this new world in which we find ourselves, we can also play football, eat peaches and smile." Sponsored by the Department of Theater and Dance. Presented in collaboration with "My Ukraine" design exhibit in the John H. Baker Gallery. (Note: This event is a part of the fundraising project to help victims of the war in Ukraine.)
