

URBAN TEMPLES AND RURAL INDUSTRY CRAFTING RESEARCH IN BANGKOK AND IRONBRIDGE

Coralie Acheson & Bhadravarna “Pat” Bongsaslip

PhD Researchers, University of Birmingham

Pat and Coralie are PhD researchers at the University of Birmingham’s Ironbridge International Institute for Cultural Heritage. While working in very different contexts—urban Bangkok (Thailand) and rural Shropshire (UK)—and focusing on industrial and religious heritage respectively, there are parallels relating to how authenticity and the function of places can be preserved whilst also meeting the needs of modern populations. In two contrasting short talks, they will present how they approached their case studies and highlight some of their results. A Q & A follows.
