Stephen W. Stoeffler, MSW, LSW

Jolynn Haney, MA
Adjunct faculty

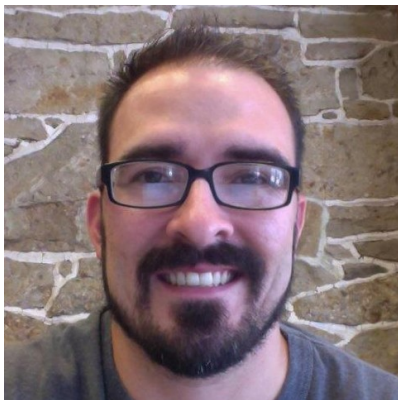

Ms. Haney has worked in the behavioral health field for more than 30 years. She has provided clinical and managerial services for programs that care for individuals with substance use problems, serious mental illnesses, and intellectual disabilities. In 2002 she formed Deerfield Data Management, a firm specializing in collecting, extracting, and interpreting behavioral healthcare information for non-profit organizations and county governments. She earned her master's degree in counseling psychology from Kutztown University and is currently a doctoral candidate in the Social Work Education program at Widener University. Her scholarly interests include perceptions and representation of autism and other developmental conditions, policy analysis, professional writing skills for social workers, cross-cultural research, program evaluation, and critical social work practice and research.

Mary Lookingbill, MSW, LSW
Adjunct faculty

Ms. Lookingbill has more than 25 years of experience in direct practice, administration, and program development on the micro, mezzo and macro levels of service delivery. A great deal of her professional career has focused on children and families, attachment and childhood trauma. Most recently, she joined with a diverse group of professionals from across Pennsylvania to develop protocols for identifying and treating children and adolescents who misuse fire. Ms. Lookingbill belongs to the Pennsylvania State Juvenile Firesetter Intervention Advisory Group and is a consultant to the state, writing curricula and giving presentations on the topic. She is an adjunct lecturer and field instructor for Temple University Harrisburg, Millersville University, and Widener University. She is an invited speaker at various local, regional and national conferences. Ms. Lookingbill earned her MSW at the University of Kansas.

Stephen W. Stoeffler, MSW, LSW
Adjunct faculty

Mr. Stoeffler has experience in the fields of child welfare, probation and parole, older adult protective services, and family homelessness. He teaches in graduate and undergraduate social work programs in the areas of diversity, ethics, social problems, human behavior, spirituality, research, social work practice, programs and organizational development, and social and economic justice. His areas of interest include social work education, social and economic justice, poverty, race relations and macro practice. He was the recipient of the 2011 Kristin Bowser Young Social Worker of the Year Award, given by the National Association of Social Workers-Pennsylvania Chapter, for his contributions and leadership within the profession of social work. Mr. Stoeffler received his MSW from Temple University and his BSW from Shippensburg University. He is currently a PhD candidate at Widener University's Center for Social Work Education.
