EVALUATION: "The Committee's evaluation shall be based on student evaluations, peer evaluations, an updated copy of the Faculty member's vita, any other pertinent data that the Faculty member wishes to submit and any other data which the department evaluation committee may deem pertinent", [Collective Bargaining Agreement, Article XII, C, 1, b].

Each of the three specific evaluation areas to be covered should be handled in two ways: (1) Selecting one of the four categories describing the evaluatee's performance. Each of the categories is intended to serve a carefully defined function, discussed below. (2) Including a thorough narrative explanation justifying the selection. Mere selection of an objective description does not constitute evaluation and is unacceptable. Evidence must be cited in support of judgments. Use additional space as needed.

Does Not Meet Professional Standards. This description should be reserved for rare cases where an individual is mismatched with his job or is simply incompetent.

Improvement Needed. This comment should be used frequently and without hesitation. It means simply that there appear to be aspects of the evaluatee's performance which could be improved. It should only rarely, and then in obvious cases, be considered pejorative. For example, beginning faculty or experienced persons taking on new assignments, should frequently be expected to need improvement in their performance.

Meets Professional Standards. This designation will probably be used to describe a majority of the cases that are considered. It is specifically intended as a means of avoiding narrow "grading" of personnel. Qualitative differences should emerge from the narrative explanation section of the evaluation.

Distinguished. This description should almost never be used. It should be reserved as a means of recognizing unequivocally superior performance.
